

Medhum’s mission is to explore the human condition as expressed through medicine, literature, and the arts. In an era marked by cultural change, societal upheaval, and systemic changes in healthcare, we are an educational resource which cultivates critical thinking and empathy in a curated forum of reviews, interviews, and opinion pieces.

Med: Medicine & Media Hum: Human & Humanities

We filter our content through a wide-angle lens to offer diverse views from artists, writers, health professionals, journalists and critics.

The Editorial Board is a unique collaborative composed of journalists, physicians, academics, artists and other healthcare professionals.

New contributors are invited to submit reviews, interviews and essays to the Editorial Board for review. Submissions related to works of literature, performing arts, and visual arts as well as essays should align with our mission statement above. We welcome reviews, essays, and opinion pieces. Most submissions will be between 500 and 1,000 words. All submissions must be original work by the author and may incorporate short excerpts of the literary works that are the subject of the piece, so long as such use complies with the fair use doctrine of US copyright law.

Medhum is a 501(c)(3) charitable organization. All donations are tax-deductible to the full extent allowed by law. We are supported in large part by private donations.

For more information, please contact

Lucy Bruell
Project Director
lucy@medhum.org

